The island is so small that coal and iron are cheaply shipped to various points; and on this account, manufacturing, though best developed near the coal fields, is not confined to these districts. Thus we see that here, as in the United States, coal makes possible an enormous industrial development. But in spite of the forest of chimneys in England and southern Scotland, the output of coal is more than sufficient to meet the demands. The materials to be manufactured, however, are not sufficient; for all the cotton, much of the wool, and part of the iron ore must be imported. These three industries, connected with cotton, wool, and iron, have made Great Britain one of the great work shops of the world. The most important is cotton manufacturing; iron ranks next, and wool is third. Ireland.-- Ireland forms a striking contrast to Great...
