Excerpt: . . . CHAPTER III. RISE AND FALL OF PORTUGUESE POWER IN INDIA. Before the last quarter of the 15th century India was to the Christian nations of the West a closed country. The whole of the carrying trade, both to the East and to the West, for centuries was in the hands of the Mohammedans. They benefited by the monopoly of it. Through the gates of the mouth of the Red Sea, and the mouth of the Persian Gulf the wealth of India poured into the marts of Arabia and Persia. After Spain and Portugal freed themselves from the Mohammedan power they were set at liberty to work out their own salvation. After a century of strenuous efforts a sea route was discovered to the East when Bartholomew Dias rounded the Cape of Good Hope in 1487. The Portuguese were not slow in taking advantage of...
